ALLIED FLEET SCOURS SEA TO FIND RAIDER

Submarine Also Reported in the Atlantic—Raider has Been Active for a Month and is Well Armed and Carries a Large Crew.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 18.—A powerful fleet of British and French warships is scouring the Atlantic today for the new terror of the seas—a German raider that is accredited with having sunk or captured more than a score of merchant ships.

Following the official announcement of the admiralty admitting the loss of a dozen British and French ships, it became known here today that at least ten British warships are taking part in the hunt.

The search is being made up and down the South American coast and on the southern part of the United States. At the men of war look for their quarry they are sending out wireless warnings to merchant ships.

In addition to the raider a submarine has been reported in the Atlantic 800 miles off the Virginia coast.

British and French consular representatives have gathered important information from the refugees of lost ships that were landed at Pernambuco from the Japanese ship Hudson Maru.

The sea fugitives were unable to give the name of the raider, but from their description it was supposed that the ship formerly was the Vint. She is well armed with guns and torpedo tubes and carries a large crew.

In addition to the search for the commerce raider the Allied fleet is attempting to locate her base, for it is supposed that she is operating from some supply point on the South or Central American coast.

Whether the raider will take flight into some other part of world's seven seas is not known, but even if she flees into the Pacific she will run the risk of encountering Japanese war vessels that will be on the lookout for her there.

The vessels known to have been sunk or captured aggregate about $25,000,000. The German ships began her depredations about December 12. Instead of striking at the North Atlantic steamer lane she went into the South Atlantic and worked down on the traffic highway between South American ports and Europe. Evidently she feared to venture into the North Atlantic because of the big fleets which are constantly on guard there.

The admiralty is making an investigation of the reports of destruction of other ships in addition to those named in the official announcement, particularly the sinking of one vessel in which 400 lives were rumored to have been lost.

According to official and unofficial reports the victims of the raider up to date are: The British steamships Drina, Georgia, Voltare, Orca, Mount Temple, Dramatic, Netherby, Hall, Radnorshire, King George, St. Theodore, Yarrowdale, Minster, French ships Samara, Nantes and Amherst; Danish vessel Hammerhus; the Japanese ship Hudson Maru and the following vessels whose nationality is not known: San George, New Portland, Nesser, Michaelis, Galley and St. Sol.

It was said by some of the 237 seamen landed at Pernambuco that the St. Theodore was probably turned into either a supply ship or another raider by the German boat that captured her.

It has been thought for some time that a German raider was loose on account of the increasing number of cruise ships, but the announcement has caused a large increase in insurance rates.

Not since the days of the Emden have shipping circles been so perturbed over the German menace. While the British deplore the loss of shipping, naval men pay tribute to the daring of the German seamen and the skill with which they have raided commerce without being caught.

The raider ship was described as a vessel of about 4,000 or 5,000 tons with one black funnel and two masts. Part of her deck was boarded in with a temporary structure to hide her guns. She was equipped with four torpedo tubes and carried a plentiful supply of ammunition. The vessel was painted a dirty gray and black paint had been smeared over her name to blot it out.

One Foot in the Grave.
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, Jan. 18.—"One foot in the grave" is a reality for Joseph Reider, 56, a railroad flagman of this city. Several days ago a toe on his right foot was frozen and amputation became necessary. Today at St. Peter's hospital the foot was buried in the family lot at Algonquin Cemetery.

City League Tonight.
Two games will be played this evening in the City Bowling League. At the Elks' alleys the Roundout Bowling Club will roll the Elks, and St. Peter's allies St. Peter's team No. 1 will roll St. Peter's team No. 2. The West Side of the Y. M. C. will lead the league.

$25,000,000 LOSS BY RAIDER'S WORK

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—Vessels valued at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 have been destroyed by the German raider or raiders in the latest onslaught against Allied shipping, steamship brokers here estimated today.

Cargo losses have been approximately at between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, which is low because several of the vessels were sailing in ballast, bringing the total monetary loss to approximately $25,000,000.

Marine insurance rates to South America, jumped at the report of the activities of the German raider, to 5 per cent, the highest rate since the beginning of the war.

Commander John Blackwood, assistant naval attaché to the British consulate in this city, has issued a statement to reassure shipping. Commander Blackwood believes that the raider cannot escape the big fleet that is now searching the Atlantic.

"This German ship will not do much more raiding," declared the commander. "We have fast patrol boats at work and we believe that if she is not captured she will soon intern at some neutral port and not attempt any raiding in the North Atlantic."

"It is my opinion that there is but one raider at large and that she is a converted merchantman, not the German cruiser Vint, as reported. "She was probably fitted out in a German port with guns and torpedo tubes and stole through the British North Sea patrol."

The fact that a German raid ship is at large is causing many changes in shipping schedules. In many American ports the sailing of British freighters has been held up temporarily, according to telegrams received here. Insurance rates have been affected also.

It is understood that United States patrol ships in southern waters are keeping a vigilant watch to see that the neutrality of this country is respected.

ALLIES FOR PEACE WITH VICTORY ONLY

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, Jan. 18.—Full approbation was given by the press today to the supplemental note of the Entente Powers to President Wilson amplifying the previous communication.

The new note is identical in spirit with the former document, but contains the intimation that the allies will be willing to enter into an international league to enforce peace upon the world if they are victorious.

The latest note is explanatory and goes into details about certain of the demands which were included in the earlier instrument. At the same time it shows that the Allies are going to prosecute the war more rigorously than ever before and are determined to win at any price. In the concluding paragraph the communication says:

"Therefore this country has made, is making and is preparing to make sacrifices of blood and treasure unparalleled in its history."

The Times, in analyzing the note, says that it proves clearly that there is no similarity between the aims of the allied powers and the German allies. It adds that the communication will certainly make this fact plain to President Wilson.

The Chronicle takes the view that President Wilson should take a more intimate view of the national principles of the countries at war. This newspaper says:

"If President Wilson wishes to give effect to his desires that peace, when it comes, shall be lasting, he cannot ultimately afford to regard the terms on which the struggle is to end with aloofness and the unconcern he has hitherto expressed."

Annual Entertainment.

The annual entertainment of Immanuel Young Men's Society of the Livingston Street Lutheran Church will take place tomorrow evening in the school hall, beginning at 8 o'clock. Preparations have been made to make this entertainment a success. As the program of last year was enjoyed very much by all who heard it, also this one promises to give much merriment and laughter. No tickets will be sold but a silver collection will be taken.

STATESMEN AND FINANCIERS INVOLVED IN "LEAK" PROBE BY LAWSON.

Distinguished statesmen and financiers involved by Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, in the probe by the House Rules Committee of the alleged "leak" to Wall Street in connection with the president's peace message, J. P. Morgan, H. P. Davidson, Frank A. Vanderlip, leaders of American finance, have been summoned to appear before the Rules Committee and testify. William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury; Joseph Tumulty, secretary to the president; and Secretary of State Lansing, together with several prominent financiers, were directly named by Lawson in his testimony. They have already entered denials of Lawson's charges.

SHRINERS SCORE BIG SUCCESS IN ROLE OF HOSTS

Brilliant Scene Presented by Annual Ball at Armory With Arab Patrol of Albany as a Delightful Feature and Two Splendid Orchestras Sharing Honors—Guests Exceeded 1,000.

Never before in the social history of the state armory have the hospitable walls of that building housed a more brilliant assemblage than the gathering of Wednesday night when the members of the Kingston Shriners' Association proved themselves most delightful hosts for more than one thousand guests who found in every detail of the elaborate function a source of enthusiastic enjoyment. The presence of the justly famous Arab Patrol of Albany, the strains of Malseholder's full orchestra and the syncopations of the Marimba band combined with the decorations and the distinctly festive atmosphere never absent from any of the social activities in which Red Fezzes figure, all contributed to make complete the evening's enjoyment for dancers and spectators, the occasion being one to linger long and pleasantly in the memory of all who participated in the superb entertainment.

A more gorgeous scene would be difficult to imagine than the huge drill shed with Old Glory suspended from every girder amid festoons of bunting below the radiance of the electric lights while similar displays along the side walls and back of the musicians' platforms made a harmonious background for the riot of color presented on the floor when the gay uniforms of the patrol were intermingled with the handsome gowned women with here and there a flash of the red fez overtopping the throng of dancers. The spectacle was most animated and colorful once the dancers got fairly under way to the inspiring strains of the musical talent present in such abundance.

Spectators had their full share of the enjoyment from the very opening of the program when a concert was given for nearly an hour after which the Arab Patrol won for itself new honors as an efficient drill corps. The gallery was crowded with onlookers who exhibited the liveliest interest in the spectacle unfolded before their gaze, a sight which in its dazzling attributes fairly rivaled some of the descriptions of fairy book lore, an effect heightened by the presence of the "Arabian Knights" themselves.

Music Delightful Feature.

Of the music it may be said that it exceeded all expectations. Malseholder's orchestra of fifteen pieces upheld the reputation of Kingston most creditably under the direction of Jacob Nollitt and was liberal in its response to encores. The One Step, Fox Trot and the always popular waltz constituted the dance program and from the opening number up to midnight the floor was crowded, presenting a most animated and attractive scene. The selections of the orchestra for the most part were "Very Good Eddie," while the waltzes from Miss Springfield were well received.

The concert which preceded the drill was a delightful offering, opening with "The Stars and Stripes Forever" by the orchestra which was followed by the Marimba band stationed on the opposite side of the hall, the two alternating through the evening making a most enjoyable contrast. The band proved a musical inno-

SHRINERS SCORE BIG SUCCESS IN ROLE OF HOSTS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Jan. 18.—The Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, today called attention to the increasing number of persons who are being asphyxiated through breathing the exhaust gases from automobile engines in garages, and suggested that the danger is greatly increased in the winter time when the weather is too cold to keep the doors and windows open.

A series of tests were conducted by chemists who were considerably affected by the poisonous gases. The tests led to the following conclusions: An automobile engine should not be operated in a small garage unless doors and windows are wide open.

In the tests conducted, the air in the garage was rendered decidedly dangerous after the automobile engine had been running fifteen minutes.

"The gas made by automobile engines in enclosed garages is known as carbon monoxide," said Director Van H. Manning of the bureau. "It is a colorless, odorless and tasteless gas. It is extremely poisonous because it combines with the red coloring matter of the blood more readily than oxygen does and blood that is saturated with it cannot take up oxygen. The dangerous symptom of this carbon monoxide poisoning comes almost without warning and collapse in a garage generally proves fatal, unless outside aid arrives very soon, because the running engine continues to generate carbon monoxide and continues to make the air more poisonous. In the tests, the chemists found dangerous amounts of carbon monoxide in the farthermost part of the garage after twenty to thirty minutes running of the engine, while near the engine the air was extremely unsafe when the engine had run about fifteen minutes. The observer did not remain in the dangerous atmosphere except when taking samples of the gas and was not exposed to the poisonous air longer than three minutes on the whole. Smarting and watering of the eyes, due to the presence of other noxious products of combustion, were the first effect. After collecting the samples, the observer contracted a headache and about an hour later became dizzy, nauseated and very ill. This lasted for ten hours. The next day he had completely recovered."

STOCKS WAVER AT OPENING

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—Many stocks made substantial gains in the first fifteen minutes trading today, but the market showed a wavering tendency after advances, and there was an absence of sustained buying power. Bethlehem Steel followed up its decline of yesterday, when it dropped nineteen points at the start to 421. Pittsburgh Coal advanced a point to 50 1/2. There were no other advances and recessions in other issues, with Marine Preferred advancing 1/4, to 85 1/2, and then dropping to 84 1/2. Utah Copper declined 1/4, to 106 1/2, from which it rose to 107 1/2. Maxwell Motor declined a point to 57, from which it quickly rose to 59. Industrial Alcohol rose 1/4, to 126 1/2, but later reacted to 124 1/2. Steel Common was steady and rose 1/4, to 112 1/2, and at the end of the first half hour sold at 113 1/2.

Stock on a Street Car.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—Mrs. Rose Sattink heard the stock fluttering early today and she hastened to board a street car to go to Bellevue Hospital. The car was not speedy enough, however, and the stock overtook it. Little Miss Sattink made her debut on the street car. At the Bellevue Hospital, both mother and daughter are reported going well.

French Limer Sails.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—Unhindered by the fear of submarines and German commerce raiders, the French liner Chicago sailed today for Bordeaux after delaying her departure for 14 hours. Officials were emphatic that the delay was not caused by the suddenly revealed activity of a German sea rover.

400 RAIDER VICTIMS TRYING TO MAKE PORT

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—So far as it is known officially no lives were lost in the destruction of merchant shipping by the German raider which is now ravaging the seas. It is unofficially reported, however, that 441 persons are missing.

Among the persons landed at Pernambuco from the raider were 13 Americans. Telegraphic reports from Pernambuco quote survivors as saying that they were severely treated by the Germans on the raider.

The correspondent of the Brazil Journal reports that some of the sailors from victim-ships claim to have been kept without food for two days.

The commander of the French steamer Nantes is said to have asserted that the raider approached his ship under the British flag.

One report in shipping circles was that the raider may be the Moewe, whose exploits in African waters are word famous. The Moewe suddenly disappeared after a burst of activity and her fate became a mystery.

After the capture of the Yarrowdale, she was turned into a prison ship by the Germans and 400 persons were put on board her and told to make port. Among them, it is believed, are 50 Americans from the crew of the freighter Georgia. These Americans are missing and if they are not on the Yarrowdale they are probably dead.

That there has been some loss of life is practically certain. Some of the refugees on the Hudson Maru, which arrived at Pernambuco on Monday night, said that officers of the ship had been shot down when they tried to resist capture by the German commerce destroyer.

Left to Guard Room in Which Thaw Slashed Himself, he Hears Noises, Shoots and is Found Unconscious.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Philadelphia, Jan. 18.—Queer noises in the room where Harry K. Thaw attempted to kill himself caused a private detective guarding the place to become hysterical today, and when the police found him he had shattered the chandelier with several pistol shots and was lying unconscious on a lounge. The shooting caused intense excitement in the neighborhood.

The detective, whose name the police said was Kelly, declared that he "heard noises" at the rear door of the apartment. When he went to investigate some unseen hand struck him down with a beer bottle, he told the police.

There were several scratches on his cheek and bloodstains on his collar. Marks were found on the door which evidently had been made by a penknife. A small penknife was found in Kelly's pocket. He was detained at the police station.

The apartment which Kelly was guarding is unoccupied, the owner, Mrs. Tacot, having gone out of town following Thaw's removal to the hospital. A guard was thought necessary to keep out curiosity seekers.

More Regiments to Be Sent Home.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The Pershing column will be back in the United States by March 1. This was stated today by army officers and war department officials.

Great surprise has been expressed by those in the war department familiar with the plans of the administration, as it is known that the troops are to be withdrawn, yet nothing has been indicated as to when the order may be expected.

It is looked for at any hour. The first move toward bringing the troops out, it was stated today, will be the recall of two or three regiments of the Guard now on the north border. This will be followed by orders to at least one more regiment of militia to return home, then will come the order to the Pershing column to withdraw to American territory.

The exact location of the American troops in Mexico is not disclosed. It is understood, however, that they are occupying territory several hundred miles from the border. Reports from Mexico are to the effect that military leaders of the Carranza faction are prepared to send troops into territory now occupied by Americans, and thus attempt to protect foreign lives and property there.

LEAK HEARINGS AWAIT COUNSEL

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The "leak" investigation is at a standstill until the house rules committee obtains the legal counsel already authorized.

A score of prominent witnesses, including Wall Street operators, bankers, brokers, editors and others, were excused this morning, subject to the call of the committee. No more public hearing are expected this week. Neither branch of congress will be in session Saturday, an adjournment is planned out of respect to Admiral Dewey, whose funeral will be held at the capitol. It is planned to resume the sessions Monday.

The task of obtaining counsel for the rules committee has proved difficult. The question of veracity which has been raised between Chairman Henry and Thomas W. Lawson has served to complicate the work of the inquiry. The aim now is to obtain the type of counsel described by Representative Lenroot, Republican member of the committee, as one so qualified as to be acceptable not only to the Democrats and Republican members of the committee, but to both sides of the house and the country at large.

Mrs. Ruth Thomasson Visconti is in deep seclusion at present and cannot be reached. An effort is being made to locate her now. She is believed to be in New York.

If Mrs. Visconti's testimony substantiates Lawson's, there is a growing belief that the investigation ought to pass out of the hands of the rules committee to a special committee, as asked originally by Representative Wood, author of the investigation resolutions.

Mrs. Brice Sent Back to St. Ann's.

She Was Sent There Some Time Ago, and Was Out on Parole—Drunk and Disorderly—Police Matron's First Case.

Miss Alice Bilson, who was appointed police matron the first of the year by Mayor Canfield, was called on her first case when Policeman Shadler placed Mrs. Margaret Brice, an old offender, under arrest for public intoxication at the West Shore depot. This morning Miss Bilson brought Mrs. Brice into recorder's court when Mrs. Brice was arraigned before Recorder Lane.

Mrs. Brice pleaded hard to be given another chance, but the court informed her that he understood she had been drunk for a week. She said that she had a cold and had taken something for it, which resulted in her getting drunk. Recorder Lane sent her back to St. Ann's Home at Albany. She was sent there some time ago, but had been released on parole.

Mrs. Brice has been in trouble a number of times and has served time both at Albany and in the county jail. Whenever arrested it has been for the same old charge—that of public intoxication.

Officer Dempsey escorted Mrs. Brice to Albany later in the morning.

Famous Pictures at K. O. H.

"A Daughter of the Gods," featuring Annette Kellermann, opened this afternoon at the Kingston Opera House, where the famous picture beautiful will be shown for matinee and evening performances each day for three days, the concluding performance being given Saturday evening. The cost of producing the film was one million dollars, and William Fox is the only individual in America who would undertake such a gigantic enterprise. The picture is considered the most elaborate and wonderful yet produced and is the most ambitious screen fantasy of the century.

Suffrage Sentinels Elated.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The suffrage sentinels at the White House today won recognition from President Wilson for the first time since they began picketing the grounds last week. As the president's limousine rolled through the north border, this will be followed by orders to at least one more regiment of militia to return home, then will come the order to the Pershing column to withdraw to American territory.

Perjury Charges Dropped.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 18.—Perjury charges against Mrs. Margaret Sattink, former wife of George Sattink, were dropped by the grand jury today. The charges arose out of Mrs. Sattink's recantation of testimony she gave during the trial of her former husband, who was charged with libel by Magistrate Corrihan.

Saugerties, Jan. 18.—The annual meeting of the Saugerties Business Men's Association was held at the Grand Hotel on Tuesday evening. The following officers were elected for 1917: President D. N. Mrs. James Rightmeyer of Livingston is visiting in East Jewett. The Alumni Association of the high school will hold their annual banquet in the assembly hall on Friday evening, Jan. 26th. Prof. Martin's orchestra will furnish the music.

Removal of Fence Posts Quickly. Fence posts of considerable size may be removed readily by hitching a chain around the post near the ground and passing it over a piece of 2 by 4 stock set at a slant against the post. Few Norwegians Can Swim. It is a curious fact that the Norwegians, considering the geography of the country, that the proportion of Norwegians who can swim is small, the number of deaths in Norway from drowning being about 600 a year. Only about 12 per cent of all the school children between the ages of twelve and fifteen have learned to swim. Norwegian sailors say the extreme coldness of the waters that have their shores accounts for this.

Dr. and Mrs. Baragwanath, on Tuesday evening, entertained to dinner the members of the official board of St. James's Methodist Episcopal Church. Twenty-seven of the officials were present and partook of the hospitality of the parsonage. The reports of the church work were most gratifying to pastor and officers, being the best in many years. As an official meeting it was unusual and inspiring. All the members and friends will rejoice that the church is so thoroughly united and in such excellent condition.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. John N. Purvis were delightfully surprised by a number of their friends at their home, No. 21 Prince street. The evening was spent with all kinds of games, victrola, piano and vocal selections. The Emperor, after giving King Constantine the choice of the Duke or the Duchess, has chosen the Duke. TWO SUBMARINES EXPECTED SOON

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Baltimore, Md., Jan. 18.—Baltimore agents of the German merchant submarine owners have been notified to expect in this country within the next two weeks not only the Deutschland, but another merchant undersea boat twice as big as the craft in which Captain Paul Koenig has paid two visits to this country.

This was learned today from the highest authority. It is known that Paul Hilke, representative of the Eastern Forwarding Company, has expressed doubt as to which would get here first—the Deutschland or the big new submarine, the name of which those in this country do not yet know. The Baltimore agents have been notified that the Deutschland and the new submarine left Germany about the same time. The speed of the new boat is not known, therefore it could not be said which would arrive first. Both are expected at New London at any time now. It is believed that Captain Koenig will be in command of the new submarine.

CHIVING UP OF REFLECTION.

Poughkeepsie's Hopes of Becoming Gun Center Vanish With Promoter.

Possibilities of Poughkeepsie becoming headquarters of the Common Sense Gun Company, makers of listless guns, vanished Wednesday with the promoter, William Van Camp, who left behind three worthless checks aggregating $7, for souvenirs of the proposed development. The police are hunting for the promoter.

Van Camp came to Poughkeepsie last week and leased quarters in the Taylor Building, on Market street, he announced in the local papers the establishment of a central headquarters for the sale of the guns, the company who are handling the business in the southern and central parts of the state. Van Camp attended Eastman College twenty years ago and on his arrival in Poughkeepsie last week he introduced himself to local officials in an effort to establish business and social prestige. The latter part of the week he presented his cards to local merchants and purchased clothing and other articles. In payment he tendered a check to each dealer, each paper being made out for $25. He received some money in change from each merchant and before the week ended he had cashed all the checks and disappeared. Van Camp is a native of New York and is a member of the New York State Bar Association. He is a graduate of Eastman College and is a member of the New York State Bar Association. He is a native of New York and is a member of the New York State Bar Association.

HOW

To Grow Miscellaneous Plants in the House.

THE following suggestions for preparations for the indoor garden and for caring for it later are made by specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

If an indoor window box is decided upon, a good depth for it is about eight inches. The bottom of the box should be covered with stones and broken pottery for drainage. This should be covered with a layer of moss to prevent the soil from working down and clogging the drainage spaces. The drainage and moss should take up to gether about two inches. The greater the body of soil above the moss the more uniformly moist it may be kept. The soil should fall to fill the box by from one and one-half to two inches.

The indoor window box should be as long as the window is wide and to get as much light as possible it should be level with the window sill. It may be placed either on brackets or a table or legs permanently fastened to it. A hole or holes should be provided in the bottom of the box and a drip pan should be placed beneath to catch drainage water.

The top of the soil should be allowed to become dry occasionally. The results of watering should be closely observed and the supply regulated according to needs. In general it is better to water lightly and frequently than heavily and infrequently, although just the reverse is considered best when watering is done out of door in summer.

Begonias are about the only plants that may be expected to flower in a window box. For the most part foliage alone must be depended upon as the contribution of the indoor plants to the attractiveness of the room. Among the plants which may be grown for foliage for window boxes are ferns, geraniums, ivy, and similar plants. The latter plant is especially valuable as a window box plant as it will thrive in spite of considerable neglect, drought and dust.

In addition to the plants already mentioned, palms, rubber plants, and cacti may be grown in pots. It is advisable in growing all these plants to make use of regular fertilizers, potting soil made up of one part compost, one part good loam and one part sand. It is well to add one twentieth part bone-meal to the mixture.

FARM LORE.

How to Determine the Amount of Fat in Cream.

Professor Lindet of the French agricultural institute has given to the Académie of Agriculture a very simple process for determining rapidly the quantity of fat in cream. It is the following: Take a glass of cream and put it in a water bath. The water bath is made up of one part of water and one part of oil. The cream is placed upon a scale and weighed. It is then placed in the water bath and allowed to stand for a few minutes. The cream is then removed and weighed again. The difference in weight is the amount of fat in the cream.

Professor Lindet uses drops of one hundredth of a cubic centimeter in size and places his paper in wooden frames to prevent it from curling up in the oven. He removes it before the spots have spread to more than three or four centimeters in diameter.

Why Oysters Make Pearls and How the Process is Accomplished

When the oyster first comes into the world it is a little living organism that floats upon the sea's surface. Then its shell begins to grow and the creature sinks to the bottom. There it opens its shell to admit such food as the sea may bring. But along with food and water comes foreign matter, most likely a grain of sand. That grain sticks in the shell and bothers the oyster. Every time it moves there is that troublesome particle. Being unable to rid itself of the visitor the oyster sends forth secretions from its body to cover the bit of sand. These secretions harden and later after layers are applied until a pearl forms.

How to Paint Overhead Without Sopping Your Hair.

When it is necessary to paint a window or any object overhead the paint or liquid usually runs off the handle of the brush and then over the painter's head. If you will take two pieces of tin solder at the ends says "H. Thomas in the Popular Science Monthly," and fasten them on either side of the brush below the head, you will have a little weight which catches the paint, preventing it from running over your head. The paint will then be applied to the object without sopping your hair.

How to Avoid Fainting Away at Awkward Moments.

When you feel faint lower your head and close the clothing around your neck and throat. It is a mistake to get up and attempt to walk when faint. As a matter of fact the fainting is a result of the brain and increases the fainting. Do not allow yourself to be frightened. Just drop your head and secure yourself and you will get over the fainting spell.

Roundabout Conclusion.

The petrified trees of Arizona are now of age, amethyst, etc. These stone crystallizations having replaced the original wood. They were once submerged in an ancient sea and again raised to earthly levels. Geologists place their age at approximately 50,000,000 years.

He had been calling on the Widow Smithers for some time, and it could not be said that he had made an impression, although he had failed to realize the fact. She decided to speed him on his way at the first opportunity. And it came that night. He heaved a sigh and said, "I have only one friend on earth—my dog." "Well," she answered, calmly, "if that isn't enough, why don't you get another dog?"

The January meeting of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. S. J. Jolie Wednesday afternoon and the members attending enjoyed one of the most profitable meetings of the winter season. It was an ideal winter's day, clear and cold, with sunshine. The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. E. A. Smiley, whose very presence is always sunshine to all attending. The devotional services were in charge of our loved member, Mrs. Edgar Macker. Following the report of the secretary and treasurer, a short business session followed. A very interesting program, as arranged by Mrs. Smiley, and the readings followed. "Our Ideals" (Hon. Lloyd George), Mrs. V. T. Wright, "Prospects," and What December Magazines are Saying, Mrs. James Jones, "Signs of the Times," Mrs. Ira Schoonmaker, "Ask Largely," Mrs. Smiley, singing, "All Hail the Power of Jesus's Name." The program was followed by observing by the local union state and national day of prayer, and several prayers were offered and "Nearer My God to Thee" followed. The union was pleased to have one of their valued members, Mrs. Mary Denman, with them after an absence of three months. Upon invitation of Mrs. Smiley Mrs. Denman very kindly consented and gave a very beautiful talk which was highly appreciated. The meeting adjourned after a few remarks from the president to meet again the third Wednesday in February, when Frances Willard Memorial Day will be observed. The hostess served very delicious refreshments and these were enjoyed with a pleasant social intercourse.

Yellow Journalism Again.

The engagement of Roger F. Ferger of Cleveland, Ohio, to Miss Helen Hutton of this city, was announced in The Freeman several days ago. Miss Hutton is at present the guest of friends in Cleveland and Mr. Ferger is ill at his home in that city. The wedding is not to take place in several weeks. Yet a sensational despatch in Albany and other morning papers today states that Mr. Ferger is "speeding" on a special train to New York to be married to Miss Hutton and that "Kingston society learned of the approaching marriage when Miss Hutton could not be found there."

Behind the Slats

Story of Revenge For A Political Crime

By EDWARD COOLEGGE

I was making a tour of Switzerland on foot. All the luggage I had with me was strapped on my back, and in my hand I carried a light alpenstock.

One morning I started from Interlaken to walk to Thun. The road I took leads along the west bank of Lake Thun, or Thunder lake, one of the prettiest bodies of water in Switzerland.

From the road one has a perpetual view of the Bernese Alps, the Elger, the Monk and the Jungfrau, whose snowy peaks rising high in the heavens may often be mistaken for light clouds. The sun was shining on the lake, over whose bosom the little steamers running between Interlaken and Thun loaded with tourists were passing back and forth.

Not far from Interlaken the road passes through a tunnel in a perpendicular cliff that forms the bank of the lake. While walking through this tunnel I caught up with a youth who, judging from his pack, was making a foot journey the same as I. He spoke to me in German, the language of that part of Switzerland, but I signified that I did not understand him, and he repeated his question in French.

"How far is it, sir, to Thun?"

"Ten or twelve miles, I believe."

He was inclined to let me go on ahead of him; but, preferring company, I adapted my gait to his. He was apparently not more than eighteen years old. No beard had yet started on his face, and his hair and complexion were fair. I took him for a Swede or a Norwegian, though such light hair and skin are common in northern Germany. We walked on together, chatting and enjoying the beautiful panorama of the lake, the hills beyond and still beyond these mountains. For awhile the young man was guarded in his speech. He then discovered that I was an American—he had supposed me to be an Englishman—and this seemed to awaken confidence, though it was not quite a fellow feeling, for he kept me still in ignorance as to who he was or where he was going. I knew, however, from his conversation that he was highly educated and one of those persons who are born to think deeply. I was astonished at his familiarity with the various schools of philosophy. That he was a greater as well as a thinker was apparent from these advanced, which to me seemed a century ahead of the times.

At Metzingen we halted for lunch—on eating sandwiches and drinking beer at a table under the trees in front of a hotel. We rested for an hour after luncheon, smoking, I my pipe, my companion cigarettes (the usual form of a smoke in that country).

The subject that most interested him was America and how to get there. I told him that it all depended on where he wanted to go and what he wanted to do.

to tell me from which point he would begin. "The Riviera," was his reply. Whereupon I informed him that from any point on the Riviera—say Nice or Mentone—one might by a short railway journey reach Genoa, from which port steamers are constantly leaving for the United States. He seemed much interested in this and more so when I told him that I had engaged passage by that route myself. When I asked him if he had any intention of visiting my country he replied that he had not.

We reached Thun about 5 o'clock, and, after refreshing ourselves with a glass of beer in the gardens of the Kurhaus, I went to my hotel, my companion going I knew not where. One meets all kinds of people traveling abroad, especially if one likes to form acquaintances, as I do. Of all those I have met in any of my tours the person who made the most impression upon me was the young philosopher about whom I learned nothing.

I went by rail from Thun to Paris, from there to Nice and from Nice to Mentone. I found at Mentone General A., who had been minister of the interior in Russia. Indeed, I stayed at the same hotel with him. Those who knew told me that several attempts had been made upon his life by revolutionists, or, as they were then called, nihilists, and that he was closely guarded. During his incumbency in office he had sent hundreds of people to Siberia, besides those he had executed. He had been proscribed by the nihilists, they having vowed to kill him. I asked why he should dread his enemies so far from home and was told that they could work to better advantage beyond the Russian borders than within them. In Russia the government could act directly. In other countries more or less red tape was necessary to arrest a suspect, and before it could be done an assassination might take place. General A. was spending a season at Mentone for his health, being afflicted with some nervous disorder. It seemed to me that a man living in fear of his life would be likely to have nerve trouble. He was very regular in his habits, going out to walk in the morning and to drive in the afternoon, always attended by men in citizens' dress, who closely eyed every one who approached him.

Notwithstanding the precautions taken the general was assassinated at Mentone, and at the time I was there. It was in June, and the days were long. About half past 8 o'clock one evening I went up to my room after dinner and, lighting a cigar, stood for a moment at my window, which was on the north side of the hotel. Several buildings were near, and from a window of one of them I saw a puff of smoke and heard a crack. There was nothing to be seen in the window, for the blinds were closed. If a shot had been fired it must have been from beyond the slats.

The occurrence did not make much impression on me, but an hour later, on going downstairs, I found the hotel proprietor, the servants, the guests, all horror-stricken. On asking the cause I was told that General A. had been shot by some one who had fired a bullet into his room through an open window. Upon asking the time the affair occurred I was told that it was about half past 8.

I knew perfectly well that I had seen the smoke of the weapon that had done the deed and could point out the window from which it had been fired, but I held my peace. Some one had revenged a long list of barbarities visited upon those who had dared to attempt to build up an oppressed people, and I was not interested in taking any part in the affair. I inquired if it was known from what point the shot was fired and was told that it was believed it had come from a tree that grew near the general's window. By this I knew that I was the only person who had witnessed the firing. By giving the information I possessed the police would have a description of the person or persons occupying the room from which the assassin had done the work, and they would be pretty sure to make the arrest. I confess that, sympathizing with the revolutionists, I had no intention of talking.

I was pleased, however, possessing such a secret, that the time had come for me to leave Mentone. My steamer was due to sail from Genoa the next morning, and I took a night train for that city. I stood, shortly before sailing, on the upper deck looking at the swarm of people, some hurrying aboard, some going ashore, all infected by that bustling usual to a steamer about to leave port.

A girl came up the gangway whose face was familiar to me. Where had I seen her? It bothered me to see a face without being able to place it, and this case annoyed me more than usual. However, since I could not recollect where I had met her I ceased to think about her, interesting myself in other persons. We soon passed out on to the bosom of the Mediterranean, and I rejoiced at the prospect of getting home.

During the next few days I looked for the girl whom I had been unable to place, both on deck and in the dining saloon. I did not see her till we had passed Gibraltar and steamed out on to the Atlantic. Then one morning, while walking on the highest of all the decks, where there were no other passengers, I suddenly came upon her sitting in a chair leaning up against a projection that shielded her from the wind.

She turned white as a cloth. At first I thought I would stop and ask her where we had met, but she turned her eyes away from me, and I saw that either I had made a mistake in thinking that I had known her or she had no desire to continue the acquaintance. But why had the meeting with me so affected her? I thought over every one I had met abroad—indeed, every one I had ever known—in order to discover if there was any with whom I had had trouble. No; the record was clear.

We stopped at Madeira and the Azores. I did not see the girl again till we had left the latter islands. But I had thought a great deal of her, and finally it suddenly flashed upon me who she was and where I had met her. She was the young person with whom I had walked from Interlaken to Thun.

After leaving the Azores I came upon her, sitting on deck where I had first seen her. I was about to pass her when she smiled at me. Of course I joined her.

"Now that we have touched at the last European port," she said, "I am willing to make myself known to you. We walked together one day in Switzerland."

"Is the costume you wore then or the one you wear now your legitimate dress?"

"The one I wear now."

I waited for her to explain, but she did not. So I said:

"Why have you deferred making yourself known to me?"

"Because I am a fugitive. Had I not had confidence that you would not betray me I should not have planned to take this steamer. Yet I was obliged to take it. You will not betray me?"

"How do you know that? If you have committed a crime it is my duty to betray you."

"I have committed no crime except in the cause of justice."

That was the end of the confidence she gave me. I did not wish her to give me any more. I knew all she could have told me. I wished that I did not know it lest I might be called upon to bear witness concerning it. I leave it to the reader to infer what I inferred. It is too terrible and too dangerous to be expressed in words.

I saw something of the girl every day or so on shipboard, but when we reached port I did not think it safe to be seen with her. I did not see her when she came ashore. For several days I scanned the newspapers, glancing to read of her arrest. Since I did not and have heard nothing of her since, I have concluded that she landed without detection. What became of her after that I do not know.

GOVERNMENT.

New York, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Ida von Clausen Dona, who has attracted much attention because of her alleged efforts to annoy Theodore Roosevelt and other noted men, has been ordered to be taken into custody by the superintendent of the Middletown State Hospital. She was once committed to the Bloomingdale Asylum, but was released on a court order, after physicians had declared her sane. She subsequently was committed to the Middletown institution, but later was allowed to go on parole in the custody of a relative. While on parole she fled from the relative and married Francis Dona.

Repartee.

Being clever at repartee consists of having at your tongue's end the words which come to others an hour later.—Life.

Tide and Time.

Contrary perhaps to the idea commonly held, the "tide" in "Christmas-tide" and "Tide" has no allusion whatever to the ocean. It dates from the period when "tide" was merely a synonym for "time." Thus in the familiar old proverb, "Time and tide wait for no man," the first two nouns express exactly the same idea. They are repeated merely for emphasis, as in the case in other old fashioned alliterative phrases like "Tag and baggage," "kick and kiss," "rack and ruin." —Youth's Companion.

KINGSTON DOING ONE THING WELL

Director Garland of Dayton Has Highest Praise for Bureau of Social Service and Co-Relation of Its Work With City Homes—The New Mission of Our Cities.

One of the most remarkable addresses ever listened to by a Kingston audience on the subject of a municipality's responsibilities to its citizens was given at a luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce at the Eagle Hotel where Dr. D. F. Garland, Director of Public Welfare in Dayton, Ohio, talked on "The New Ideals in City Government." It was a most inspiring message, some of its aspects being such as to make the newspaper man reporting it wonder if the city editor had erred in not so stating the tabernacle reporter on the subject. Dr. Garland is a former minister but he believes that in his work as shown by the tone and message with which he delivered his message. An innovation in this luncheon was the presence of a number of women who took an active interest in the luncheon. Dr. Garland also in the preliminary remarks of President R. E. Lightfoot who introduced the speaker.

One of the pleasing features of the speech was when Dr. Garland took a few moments to pay tribute to the work of the local Bureau of Social Service and the co-relation of its activities with that of the City Home. He declared that the work Kingston is doing in this direction is in advance of anything being attempted anywhere else in the country and it is even ahead of the policy of Dayton in many respects.

"You're doing it a little better than we are in Dayton," said Dr. Garland, "and I speak from the fullness of experience, your Social Service Bureau program is ahead of anything found anywhere in the United States. You co-relate your service bureau and your infirmaries in a most businesslike way and the results as I have studied them are most satisfactory and encouraging."

This statement was received with applause which was renewed when the speaker mentioned Mrs. MacMillan and Mr. Edmondson by name. The speaker opened his remarks with a reference to William S. Kies, vice president of the National City Bank, as to the need for organization in our communities and teamwork. He used this as an illustration for the need of our city to enter into an active organized effort for the conservation of human lives. A summary of his speech is as follows:

The city dominates in the life of America today. This was not true fifty years ago. The developments of science, invention and of every kind have drawn the people together in cities so rapidly in the last one hundred years that now nearly 50 per cent of our population live in our cities. Truly new conditions of life have thus been created. The cities have grown too rapidly to allow for provisions against unfavorable living conditions. The trend of the age has been unfavorable to the securing of the highest degree of human welfare. Our cities, for the most part, grew without plan and were too frequently considered and governed in the light of physical entities, without regard to their moral and spiritual character. They were viewed and governed almost wholly as if they were merely to serve the cause of trade, industry and commerce. Sanitation, proper housing, parks, recreation grounds, health protection, safety provisions, and such human welfare objectives received scant, if any, consideration. In addition, the city was regarded as a splendid field for political propaganda, with the result that our American cities had the unenviable distinction twenty years ago, of being "the most inefficient, expensive and corrupt in the civilized world." "America's most conspicuous failure in government."

Social Conditions in American Cities. As a result of our negligence in the beginning of this century, we find unnumbered thousands of our people merely existing in the congested areas of our cities, where air and light are luxuries. In most of our American cities nearly one-half of our people must sleep every night under conditions below the minimum agreed upon as necessary to physical health, having less than 400 cubic feet of air space per person.

Thousands of little children, the future citizens of America, are still underfed, going to school either without breakfast or half hungry. During the winter months and certain other seasons of the year, from three to seven millions of our working people are sick, with the consequent misery, suffering and want which follow.

A great army of unemployed, such as vagrants, dependents, insane, feeble-minded, and moral delinquents, exist in this country, a burden to themselves, a menace and expense to society and government. Competent students of industrial conditions tell us that every minute of every day in the year, finds us carrying one person to the hospital or the grave, injured or killed under the driving wheels of industry.

One-eighth of our new-born babies die before they reach the end of their first year. One hundred and fifty in every one hundred thousand population die annually from the preventable disease of tuberculosis, 75 per cent of these deaths being in the productive period of life. Our thirty millions of wage-earners lose on an average of nine days each every year on account of ill health, part of which is due to social neglect coming through bad housing, insanitary and crowded living conditions, ill-ventilated factories, etc. This alone causes an annual wage loss to workers in America amounting to at least five hundred millions of dollars.

Through lack of a federal plan and federal oversight of the distribution of immigrants, a large majority of whom are trained farmers, more than 90 per cent of them are crowded into our already congested cities, while 45 per cent of our arable land has never yet been touched with the plow.

Under our ultra-individualistic scheme of life 2 per cent of our people now own 60 per cent of our tremendous wealth, an unequal distribution, which results in a condition of extreme plutocracy on the one hand, and poverty on the other.

The New Conception of Government.

In the light of this knowledge, there has sprung into being a new conception of the duty of the state to the people who constitute the state. Within the last twenty years, all over this land, there has arisen a tremendous protest against the inequalities and inequities of a system of life producing such a human harvest of loss and bitterness. These social conditions must be changed, if our cities are to be preserved and our Republic is to continue. The life of our people must become a consideration, if this nation is to compete successfully in the new world struggle for supremacy in this twentieth century. The city must clearly regard it as its duty to concern itself with the special problems of human life, of community efficiency, and of community betterment.

The Dead Cities of the World.

History clearly teaches us that the kingdoms of the world which were destroyed, perished because of their social injustice, their political corruption and their indifference to the physical and moral welfare of their people. Nineveh, once the magnificent capital of the great Assyrian Kingdom, has been for centuries buried out of sight; so of Babylon and other great cities that dominated the civilization of the past. When the prophet of the new dispensation came out of the hill country of Galilee and saw the unequal distribution of the wealth of Jerusalem, its social injustice, its neglect of the poor and the needy, its blindness to its duty, and its refusal to respond to the call of God to do justly, to love mercy, he wept over it and pronounced its doom. In the experience of the past, we can read the prophecies of the future. If our cities are to abide, they must be made politically sound, socially and physically clean, and they must be organized to conserve and to promote the highest interests of the people who live within their borders.

The Dayton Social Program.

The city of Dayton believes that the welfare of all should be the ultimate goal of the community, and has therefore established, by charter provision, a Department of Public Welfare. We are acting on the principle that human nature, under proper environment and with proper direction and encouragement, is capable of far greater happiness, efficiency and service than have ever yet been attained in human experience. This Department of Public Welfare is an organized community expression of the new conception of the value of a human life.

The Scope of the Charter Provision.

The Dayton charter provides for the organization of perhaps the broadest and most far-reaching department of public welfare yet conceived for a city in America. It is charged with the duty of managing all charitable, correctional and reformatory institutions and agencies belonging to the city; the use of all recreational facilities of the city, including parks and playgrounds; the supervision and inspection of all public amusements and entertainments. He is given complete authority touching the important matter of public health, its preservation and promotion; the abatement and suppression of nuisances; the sanitary inspection and supervision of the production, transportation, storage and sale of food and foodstuffs. He is also charged with the duty of providing for free legal aid for the poor, outdoor relief, the establishment of a free labor exchange, and also for the study of and research into the causes of poverty, delinquency and crime, and any other social problems in the community.

The Reasons for This Service.

The city as a community organization has for its clear purpose the economic prosperity of its people, their life and their general welfare. The city, being the common agency for securing the common good, must organize itself to render to the public all the service which the public demands in the interest of community welfare, such as private employment, promoting health, lending money in times of stress, furnishing free legal aid and defense, providing public recreation, outdoor relief, hospital service, etc., for those who are not economically or physically able to provide themselves with such necessities. The city government is the active and natural agency through which the collective will of the municipality may be found its full expression.

Secondly: The municipal government, being the only agency in a given community, covering the entire community, is, on that account, the logical agency to which should be committed the entire public welfare program. The government agency is the only agency within the city which represents 100% of all the souls within its bounds. Beside, the city is the only agency which has the authority, the power and the means equal to the needs which must be met.

Thirdly: The city should bear the responsibility for the cure of the social ills of today, because the responsibility of the city is inseparably interwoven with individual responsibility; for example, the health of an individual does not depend wholly upon himself. His health depends upon society in large measure for he cannot protect himself against the spread of contagious diseases. He can be under no habit of mind and life, provide recreation for himself and his children, if his employment is also due to great industrial crises or combinations and conditions over which the individual workman has no control, and in the face of which he is absolutely helpless. Accidents to individuals are often due to conditions which cannot be changed by the individual, but which can only be changed by corporate or municipal regulation. In the matter of food-stuffs, the individual is helpless, unless the municipality regulate the production and care and distribution of food from the producer to the consumer. Pure milk is an absolute necessity to the life of hundreds of thousands of babies throughout our cities. The parents as well as the baby are helpless to provide themselves with this absolute necessity unless the municipality supervises the supply.

Fourthly: Public social needs should be met by the democracy in a democracy; otherwise, our democracy is rendering only a partial service to the community, and is therefore, by so much, falling as a democracy.

Fifthly: All that makes for improvement of living and social conditions is a proper object of the municipality, for the reason that it is a community burden and should therefore be borne by the entire community and not be carried by a few philanthropically-disposed people in the community. As matters stand now in America, a few people carry the entire social burden, and the bulk of the people escape all obligation. In Dayton, we found, after federating our charities, that less than 1,200 people in a city of 125,000 supported all our charities, and philanthropies. The great bulk of our population, so far as contribution to these public agencies, for good, the demands of our present civilization will never be completely and adequately met until the cause of human welfare shall share equally in importance in city budgets with the care and conservation of property. The social burden is a community burden and should be carried by the entire community.

Sixthly: The municipality should undertake the entire public welfare program, because only then will the entire social needs of the community be completely and adequately met. Private social agencies, however efficient and well supported cannot be expected to meet the total need for public welfare work in any given municipality.

The Dayton Program in Operation.

Dayton has laid the foundation for and is working toward the realization of this new conception of the obligation of the city toward all her citizens. The entire community burden cannot yet be assumed by the city on account of the lack of revenues to cover the total need. However, the Department of Public Welfare, through a co-operative scheme of organization, has brought under one centralized control, all public health nursing and all public recreation functions for the entire city. The private citizen boards of social agencies remain intact and in control of the policy and personnel of their working force. The city furnishes everything except salaries of social workers and some recreation supplies. Gradually, the city will relieve private philanthropy of its burden and will eventually take over the entire field of public health nursing and public recreation. The same scheme of service is followed in dispensing outdoor relief. The department operates here through the Associated Charities, supplying funds for coal, groceries and shoes. We have found this plan in a people's non-partisan government, to work most effectively. The efficiency of the scheme has been most materially advanced, and the measure of service rendered the people has increased far beyond our fondest expectations. We have merely applied in this centralized, co-operative scheme, the wisdom which enlightened business organization offers us.

In the prophecy of St. John, the Divine, we are given a poet's dream of an ideal city—a city of hope and health and of fullness of life. Through the streets of this city flows the river of the Water of Life, and on every side there flourishes in perennial beauty the Tree of Life; and the streets are paved with the most precious metal, and the children have ample room to play and are never hungry. The light shines always bright and there is room for all. The inhabitants of that city will never say, "I am sick" and into that city there will never be found broken lives or blasted hopes, or burdened souls. It is the dream city, the Utopia of all time. Will it ever be realized on earth? The poet-prophet tells us that it is a city coming down out of heaven from God. Then it is a city we dare hope some day to realize, the model city of all times.

How far we must travel from Ruskin's city, the City of Yesterday, to this city of St. John, the City of Tomorrow? It is coming slowly, but surely—it is coming here on earth and in America, the realization of the city of our dreams. It lies far ahead, but it is within our reach, a goal worth striving for, this city of our hopes—a great center of throbbing life, of health and happiness, of light and the fullness of joy—a city where social justice and the common welfare are ever the objectives of human aspiration and hope.

The City of Yesterday.

John Ruskin once said: "A city is a place where summer and winter are only alternatives of heat and cold; where snow never falls white, nor sunshine clear; where the ground is only a pavement and the sky no more than the glass roof of an arcade; where the utmost power of a storm is to choke the gutters and the finest magic of spring, to change mud into dust."

Sottong was still there his brother passed to the great beyond.

Leslie E. Mott is recovering from a severe attack of acute indigestion. Mrs. Alexander Smith visited her friends, Mrs. Essie Libolt and Mrs. Horton, of Kingston on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

George Hasbrouck has vacated the blacksmith shop in this village and with his family moved to Saugerties, where he has secured a position as a horsehoeer with Mr. Winston of that place. The latter gentleman is the owner of a large number of trotting horses and Mr. Hasbrouck's duties will include the pleasant task of accompanying the horses wherever they are taken for racing to see that they are properly shod. Their destination in the near future will be Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Winston is a well known contractor and if the writer is correctly informed, was the one who had charge of the construction of the Ashokan dam. We congratulate Mr. Hasbrouck upon his good fortune in having acquired so lucrative a position. Claude Brundage of Highland has taken the shop left vacant here and will be pleased to receive the patronage of all who need work in that line.

Walter Stewart and son, Walter, Jr., were among the recent victims visited by King Grip. Fortunately he did not tarry long and they are now fully convalescent. Miss Rena Sottong is also recovering from the same difficulty. Mrs. Terpening is somewhat better than at last report, but is still extremely weak. Mr. Evert remains about the same and probably there will be very little change until his malady (pneumonia), has run its course.

Mrs. Edward Ashton and Mrs. Emma Dickerson returned to Esopus on Tuesday after spending a very enjoyable month with Mrs. Ashton's son, Herbert C. of Brooklyn, N. Y. Neighbors and friends are exceedingly glad to welcome them once more and also delighted to see Mrs. Ashton enjoying such perfect health.

The present fine condition of the ice for skating on the pond near the West Shore station affords a pleasant pastime for the young people of the village. Mrs. Leslie Mott and Mrs. William Witt went to Kingston last Monday to visit their sister, Miss Minnie House, who is in the Kingston City Hospital recovering from a serious operation. Her condition at that time was favorable. Mrs. Mott and Mrs. Witt anticipate visiting her again on Thursday and hope to find her much improved by that time.

Big Game Next Wednesday.

What will no doubt be the fastest game ever played in the Holy Cross parish house will be the one played there next Wednesday evening, when the Young Central team lines up against the Pioneer Five in a game of basketball. Both teams have been doing some great work so far this season, defeating some of the fastest teams in the city and county. The Centrals having won four straight and the Pioneers five each losing one, the very first played. This will decide who are city champions as these two teams are the only ones playing any real basketball so far. A great contest can be looked for Wednesday evening and it has already been talked of among fans, so wherever these two teams have played they have been a great draw. So this game will be the same of all games. Dancing will be enjoyed after the contest with music by Steve Miller's well known orchestra.

Queer Men.

tion being imported especially for the occasion from the Biltmore Hotel, New York. It is made up of natives of Guatemala under the direction of M. Jose Mata, the musician numbering eight men.

That Merry Marimba.

The marimba itself is an oddly shaped instrument being a sort of elongated xylophone from which the music is produced by sticks with padded tips, the effect being distinctly novel and pleasing. The marimba is built of the wood of a certain tree and it is said that this kind of wood is used throughout although some of these instruments have gourds used as resonators. In effect it was something like a reversion to music of a primitive type and as the same thing has been said of the new dances maybe that is the reason the two seemed to go so well together. Anyway the enterprise of the Shriner's committee in securing the services of these musicians just now in great demand in New York and elsewhere was the subject of much complimentary comment among the dancers.

None of the Guatemalans could speak much English but they easily comprehended what the dancers wanted and the demands for encores were repeated and vigorous. For once Kingston dancers had a sufficient quantity of music for when the band ended a piece the orchestra started up and the waltz between dancers were never more than a moment or two which satisfied lovers of the terpsichorean exercises for one occasion at least. The arrangement also pleased the gallery. The music being practically continuous.

The account of the ball would not be complete without mention of the number of handsomely gowned women and girls in evidence in all arms on the floor. The younger people were out in greater numbers than similar entertainments heretofore and the dancing was a delight to the spectators as well as to the participants. Many of the Albany and other out of town contingents commented upon the wealth of feminine beauty that Kingston boasts and the compliments bestowed thereon were well deserved. Indeed, refreshments were served during the evening in booths attractively arranged and decorated, these being placed at the right of the entrance to the hall. One large pavilion was furnished with tables and chairs for ice cream and other refreshments while a commodious booth was likewise liberally patronized.

Members of the Patrol.
The Arab Patrol, whose presence contributed so much to the emphatic success scored by the Shriner's Association, was composed of the following well known Albatross: Chief Ben V. Smith, Captain Carl A. Schmidt, First Lieutenant Leroy Smith, Second Lieutenant Aaron P. Crounse, Musician Fred J. Collins, George C. Smith, James T. Smith, John M. Delouville, Harris P. Parr, Edward A. Hurlburt, John Wirth, Grover C. Long, William Vaughn, John Foll, Fred D. Morris, J. Ward MacLaughlin, George H. Lewis, William C. Coogan, William P. Devorau, John F. Heldenrich, Benjamin Nicholls, Eugene Halse, Henry L. Lansing, Rodney E. Gooding, William Peters, Ed. J. Peters, Harold Seaman, L. C. Vanderheyden, James H. Millard, Color Sergeant Franklin U. Sargent, Color Guards Edward C. Shoup, J. W. McEwan, Banner Bearer Elmer E. Ross.

Drill Pleased Everyone.
In their red fezzes, green jackets embroidered with gold, yellow satin trousers and white leggings and shoes, the patrol presented a rich color scheme as they assembled under the waving banners and the bright glow of the incandescents. With a precision that would have done credit to any military organization, the squads went through their difficult evolutions under the direction of Captain Schmidt without a single hitch. Their work awakened the admiration of the spectators, among whom were a number of past and present officers of the national guard, all present joining in the applause which greeted the varying figures of what is known as Set No. 1 in the parlance of the patrol. The different figures were executed with an accuracy little short of marvellous, the squads forming into wheels, stars, triangles large and small, to say nothing of the marching and counter-marching back and forth across the big drill hall whose interior has seldom witnessed a more attractive appearance with the gayly uniformed men drilling against a background of feminine loveliness and elaborate decorations in which Old Glory had a conspicuous place. That the Shriner's and their guests were pleased at the exhibition staged by the Albatross is putting it mildly. Round after round of applause greeted each phase of the maneuvers which were carried out to the strains of an appropriate orchestral accompaniment.

Danced to a Late Hour.

With the order to break ranks the patrol ceased its exhibition and prolonged handclapping and dancing followed, continuing until 2 o'clock this morning. Altogether the pronounced success of the Shriner's annual entertainment was due in no small measure to the efforts of the Arab Patrol and local members were enthusiastic in expressing their appreciation of the drill. Incidentally members of the patrol were pleased as witnesses to the presence of several substitutes pressed into service at the eleventh hour it was feared that the customary good showing would be marked by a few inadvertent lapses, but such fears proved groundless. The drill was generally pronounced as one of the best ever presented in Kingston and one of the best exhibitions ever staged anywhere by the efficient Albany organization.

Altogether the affair was a distinct success from every point of view, and the Shriner's were the recipients of praise from hundreds for the excellence of their hospitality and the completeness of the appointments of their annual social event, the standard set in this respect for 1917, being a splendid precedent for similar festivities in the years to come.

TWO BASKETBALL GAMES SATURDAY

A double-header with two of the fastest teams on the basketball circuit is the big event on the high school sport calendar for Saturday afternoon. The girls are slated to play Quassaick Hall of Newburgh, the best team in Orange county, and the Middlets will follow with the speedy Poughkeepsie Y. M. C. A. Juniors as visitors. The first game starts at two o'clock, dancing to take place after the contests, all for an admission price of fifteen cents.

The Newburgh maidens on their own court defeated the Kingstonians earlier in the season, their first loss of a game for the girls since the opening of the new high school. They have resolved to put the brakes on their sisters' championship aspirations and a good game may be expected.

The Middlets have been hitting things at a high speed and are determined that the march toward their goal shall not be retarded. Poughkeepsie is wild over basketball and has centered some of its attention on the juveniles of the Y. M. C. A. so that the follow-up game is sure to have thrills if the first one is found lacking in this respect.
Lacking in this respect.
Under Captain Joyce's wing at a safe distance from that foregoing scarecrow, ineligibility, the big team will saunter out to Ellenville Friday night to see what's doing in the basketball line. At home the islanders are a dangerous foe and it is with precaution that the advance will be made by Kingston. This will be the first out of town game for the Marooners and the outcome will show their true condition, providing fair treatment is given them. Kingston surprised all when they badly trounced Ellenville several weeks ago in the local gym, but the way will not be so smooth Friday in that village.

Dark clouds hovering over the girls' hopes for the interscholastic championship lifted considerably Wednesday upon the receipt of a letter from Principal Clarence E. Bennett of the Beacon high school to the effect that no team has rightfully represented that school at basketball this year. Two weeks ago a team purporting to be the high school team of that city defeated Kingston on the local court by a 10-7 score. With Beacon out of the way, only Quassaick Hall remains between Kingston and their goal thus far. The Beacon school's principal in sending the warning said that he had learned from other principals that pupils in and out of his school were on the team playing under the school name without his sanction. Some of Kingston's regulars, aided by a few outsiders, are going to play the return game at Beacon as an independent team.

MARTIN G. BRUMBAUGH

By Martin G. Brumbaugh, Governor of Pennsylvania.

I believe that the rehabilitation of our national merchant marine is today an economic necessity. We are devoting our energies now to supplying munitions to the warring nations and to the building of ships for foreign registry. In the long range of national progress and industrial independence and dominance both these activities may well cause us to pause and consider.

When the munition market ceases we shall have made no appreciable progress in training our workers or equipping our industries for the great industrial warfare that must inevitably follow the conclusion of hostilities. In this coming conflict for markets we are making no advance in industrial preparedness.

We were startled at our lack of military preparedness and we shall be even more startled by our lack of industrial and educational preparedness. We are doing little or nothing to equip our industries for the world markets soon to open, for which there will be the most vigorous competition.

We should now, by national enactment, set seriously to work to rehabilitate our merchant marine. Congress should encourage local enterprise and private initiative. We do not want government owned carriers by water any more than by land.
